STATE FORESTRY OFFICE 'LETZLINGER HEIDE'

Established in 1884, the military training ground of Letzlinger Heath is located north of Magdeburg. Hunting experts know that areas managed by German federal forestry administration are true Eldorados of wildlife with correspondingly good harvests.

Driven hunts in this vast area require approximately 80 hunters fill all strategic positions. Such a high number of shooters requires excellent planning and organization from this Federal forestry operation. When participating in hunts of this dimension, the extensive experience and professional ism of the Federal forestry officers becomes obvious at first sight. Stands are raffled for reasons of fairness. One drive is performed per day, followed by the display of the game animals.

Main game types are red deer and wild boar, with roe deer also being present across the entire area. Personal bag permits have always been very generous over the past years, and many regular guests are already looking forward to the event. Be sure to get one of the limited places at the Letzlinger Heide military training ground.
